Stall wars: 11 yrs since law was framed, street vendors demand space in city

hs_9520614_50126_211-0/?

up at NDMC's Convention Centre on Thursday from Sarojini Nagar, Trilokpuri, Madanpur Khadar, Rohini, India Gate and Harkesh Nagar in response to a call by the National Association of Street Vendors of India (NASVI). While the world marked May 1 as International Labour Day to honour workers, this gathering met to observe the 11th anniversary of the Street Vendors (Protection of Livelihood and Regulation of Street Vending) Act, 2014 — and to ask questions.

Before the event started, snatches of conversation filled the room about evictions, vending certificates, hawking zones, microloans and much more. But one common anxiety loomed over all: "Kab rehri utha lenge, pata hi nahi chalta (We don't know when they will seize our vends)." Nazma, 49, sold crisps, namkeen and sweets near Max Hospital and RG Square Mall. "There were dozens of us. Then one day, after a scuffle, we were told not to put up our stalls for two days. That turned into a week. It's 11 months now," she said. "I have this vending certificate but what's the point if there's no place to sell?"

Rani, another vendor, recounted how her stall was demolished in the runup to the G20 Summit in 2023. "I sold chips on Mathura Road. I'm a single mother and want to educate my kids. But higher education? Not possible. Where will the money come from? At present, I just sneak by with a stall near my house and manage

The anniversary of the legislation was almost forgotten in the airing of grievances and lived experiences — from fresh vending surveys and harassment allegations to hawking zones and town vending committees. Kanchan, 45, who sold samosas and jalebis at Sarojini Nagar Market, muttered, "Kisi din adhikariyo, kisi din police. People say we block footpaths, but how can we feed the mouths if we aren't given any space?"

Even those with designated vending zones have found the ground reality. Lipi, in her forties, who ran a cold drink stall near India Gate, said, "First, we had no zone. Now we have, but it's the same. We bring items to sell and half are confiscated by the authorities. What's the point?"

Speaking on behalf of the vendors, Arbind Singh, national coordinator, NASVI, said, "The street vendors are called encroachers when they don't sit at their designated places. But what if they haven't been given any place at all?"

Recognition through the Street Vendors Act was a milestone, but implementation is where the real work lies."

A fresh survey of street vendors is under way. Around 75,000 street vendors were identified in a 2022 survey, but NASVI and other vendor bodies estimate the actual number in Delhi to be over five lakh.

The women submitted a 10-point charter of demands, among them being inclusion in the ongoing vending survey, designation of vending zones by MCD, access to clean toilets and water, protection from police harassment, financial support

The Advanced Strategic Management Programme by IIM Kozhikode (https://iimkozhikode.emeritus.org/iimk-advanced-strategic-management-programme?utm\_source=timestoi&utm\_medium=affiliate&utm\_campaign=times\_toi\_article\_spotlight) is honing experienced professionals' skill sets to lead and implement strategic initiatives with efficacy. Success stories of its alumni shed light on how this academic experience fosters strategic leadership, enabling the participants to take on larger responsibilities within their companies and attribute their progression to the skill set polished during this programme.

In times when organisations face increasing complexity and competition, the ability to think strategically has become essential for professionals at all levels. These developments have caught the attention of C-suite professionals and leaders adapting to align with this changing tide and be in the loop with a non-linear corporate environment. Business leaders<sup>2</sup> today need a broader and multidisciplinary set of skills, encompassing strategy to drive growth and accomplish goals in such a dynamic terrain. Effective leaders must navigate a complex array of variables and exhibit nuanced viewpoints.

Here's what IIM Kozhikode's alumni have to say:

"The modules covering Strategy, Economics and Finance, were the standout features of this programme for me. I have been a part of various strategy teams for some time now but have gained an enhanced analytical ability after completing this programme." - Raghuraj Venkatapur (Senior Advisor Architect/Azure Capability Lead, DXC Technology)

"After completing the programme, I was able to actively apply the learnings gained, especially from the Analytics and Decision-making tools. This helped me build clearer and stronger business growth models." - Dinesh Agaskar, CEO,
